3.0. OBJECTIVES

The objectives of this policy are to encourage people to make a report about potential non-conformance and misconduct and ensure that these reports are properly and lawfully dealt with, supporting and protecting the confidentiality of all parties involved.

4.0. WHAT SORT OF CONDUCT CAN I REPORT UNDER THIS POLICY?

- Bullying, discrimination or other unacceptable behaviour.
- Victimising someone for making a report.

5.0. WHAT SORT OF CONDUCT IS NOT INCLUDED UNDER THIS POLICY?

The protections under the Whistleblower Laws do not apply to typical workplace grievances. If you have a personal employment matter, please talk to your manager, seek advice from People and Culture gladacademy@gladgroup.com.au or contact the Fair Work Ombudsman (FWO) via their website <https://fairwork.gov.au> or call 13 13 94.

Examples of matters that are not Whistleblower matters are:

- A decision related to your employment, such as transfer, promotion, disciplinary action or termination.
- A decision related to the terms and conditions of your employment.
- Conflict between you and another employee.
- If you are unsure about this, please contact one of Glad Group's Whistleblower Disclosure Officers (WDOs) whose details are set out below. In addition, you can contact the FWO for information about workplace rights and obligations.

Whistleblowing is a constructive process and should be used as a last resort, when other reporting systems have been exhausted or are not effective, or where anonymity in reporting is desired.
